The CERN Burn: Trump Decides to "Troll History"

By 2016, Donald Trump used his access to Gen. Michael Flynn to quietly direct DARPA, then in secret works with CERN in Switzerland, to commission the first time machine ever constructed.<sup>1</sup> His first stop was World War Two, but he wasn't there to stop Hitler. Trump was there to "talk shit about Anne Frank."

The Washington Post's most reliable White House sources, carefully vetted by publisher Jeff Bezos,<sup>2</sup> claim he then used the quantum device to travel back into 1943. He built it much like a telephone booth but had it segregated and marked "white only" in case it materialized "in Harlem or something."

The first test was flawless, an absolute success. He dialed the operator, dialed a year, and Trump went directly to Amsterdam<sup>3</sup>, it was stated. "He stood outside Anne Frank's attic window with a bull horn, merely to taunt the poor Jewish girl for being too fat."<sup>4</sup>

"You're a tubby, Anne!" he cried, "You're too fat! How are you going to fit in the rail car?" the sources familiar with the top secret experiment claim, shaking their heads.<sup>5</sup>

"He wouldn't leave until she was crying. He had her crying like Chuck Schumer. Cryin' Chuck. So you know it was bad, man. When the poor girl finally broke into tears Trump started dancing a jig in mockery and pointing, laughing.

"Hahaha! Cryin' Chuck!" he said, with Anne Frank completely oblivious to a histrionic and effete American politician she had never heard of. "Cryin' Chuck."<sup>6</sup> added another source who knows a friend of the friend of a CNN boom operator who has seen a picture of the White House interior.<sup>7</sup>

Soon after she regained composure, sources say,<sup>9</sup> Anne grabbed her diary and began a counter-attack in case he tried to catch her off guard again. She wrote, on August 21, 1943, the following notes:

"Strange visit by mean time traveler. I will give as good as I get, but it must be a respectful exchange of ideas and concerns. Clearly, for this to take place, my ultimate burns must take place in an appropriate rap battle.

*MC Anne is in da house
don't matter if I ain't so rich
you best respect
you punk ass bitch
I got mad skills
spittin' the rhyme

and time

you got some nerve to talk that shit your pale ass nothing but a catcher's mitt..."*

Sources at the Washington Post said the CIA leaker<sup>10</sup> who saw the actual rap lyrics wanted to photograph it but could not due to national security concerns. Instead, he memorized it, wrote it in a "burn after reading" memo and sent it to press assets. No copies exist.

Yale historian Dick Smegmaugh has reviewed this sample with Anne Frank's actual writing and has confirmed it is genuine.<sup>11</sup>

"I'm 100% certain it's her. The style, the nuances... pure Frank. It would be impossible to create such a masterful forgery that is so clearly her you don't even need to see the writing sample itself."<sup>12</sup>

Anne Frank jots down notes on Donald Trump's appearance, crafting the "ultimate burns" to unleash in "an appropriate rap battle."
